Partney brothers found guilty

Alderman says family will appeal verdict in perjury case.

By Andy Siering and Mike Myers Staff writers

EAST ALTON — An appeal is planned by 4th Ward Alderman Dan Partney and his brothers, Don and Dave, who were found guilty of perjury by a jury at 8:30 Wednesday night in the 3rd Circuit courtroom of Associate Judge Lela Maddox.

Don and Dave Partney were each charged with one count of perjury because of sworn affidavits they submitted, listing their business address as their residence, during last April's city-township election.

The jury returned guilty verdicts on all four counts. Perjury is a Class 3 felony potentially punishable by two to five years in prison. A sentencing date has not been set.

Dan Partney said Wednesday night the verdicts will be appealed.

"Probably tonight my political opponents are dancing in the street, thinking Dan Partney is washed up," he said. "But they are far from being done with Dan Partney. They have awakened a sleeping bear."

Partney said Assistant State's Attorney Richard Rybak painted the brothers as "big, powerful, rich people who thought they were above the law" and the jury apparently believed him.

He said Leon Scroggins, the Partneys' attorney, was unable to convince the jury he and his brothers believed they were right in listing the business address as a legal residence, had been told they were right by two attorneys, and therefore did not commit perjury.

"We rolled the dice and shot craps," Dan said.

During closing arguments Rybak urged the jury of six men and six women to use "common sense" about what constitutes a residence. He described the Partneys as "rich, influential and powerful" men who "want to distort and bend the law to apply to them."

The purpose they were voting at the business location was to maintain Dan Partney's power in that precinct. The Partneys, Rybak said, are "not bumpkins... not new to the political system. Their father was the mayor."

"The whole purpose of voting and enforcing the election laws is at stake here," Rybak said.

Failure to convict the Partneys, he said, could result in wholesale "packing" of precincts to control elections.

Dan Partney said Wednesday night Rybak had not shown "one shred of evidence" his brothers had ever believed anything other than the lawyers' opinion that the business could be used as their legal residence.

"If you can't trust the opinion of lawyers, who can you trust?" he asked.

Don and Dave Partney swore that 2500 Missouri Ave., where the family business, Granite Sheet Metal Works, is located, was their legal residence. Dan Partney swore in supporting affidavits that his brothers' legal residences were the business address.

The affidavits became necessary after former 4th Ward Alderman Sharon Perjak challenged Don and Dave Partney's right to vote in Precinct 8.

State's Attorney Bill Haine ordered an investigation after Perjak complained.

The issue of whether Granite Sheet Metal Works was Don and Dave Partney's actual residence was scarcely ever at issue. The jurors were shown photographs and a videotape of the premises taken by Granite City police, and Police Chief Don Knight testified that Don Partney had acknowledged living elsewhere.

Rybak introduced a deed showing that Dave Partney owns a residence on Shilene Drive in Nameoki Township, outside the Granite City limits, and evidence showing that Don lives on Thomas Court, outside of Precinct 8.

At the heart of the matters for jurors to consider was whether the Partneys knowingly committed perjury.

In her instructions to the jurors at the end of the trial, Judge Maddox said, "A person commits the crime of perjury who, when under oath or affirmation, makes a false statement which he does not believe to be true."

The jury spent more than two hours in deliberation.

All three brothers testified they did not know or believe the business address could not be used as a legal residence for voting purposes.

Rybak contended that all three Partneys knew the business address was not Don and Dave Partney's legal residence.

Scroggins contended that he and another attorney, Bill Schooley, had advised the Partneys that it was legal to claim their business address as their residence for voting purposes. He also claimed Granite City Clerk Bob Stevens had told Dan Partney it was legal to vote from the business address.

Among those who testified were Perjak, Kathy Williams, who was an election judge on duty that day at Precinct 8, Knight, Police Det. Rich Scharidan, Schooley and Randy Bono, a former law partner of Haine.

Schooley testified that he himself voted from his law offices on Edison Avenue, and that he had told Dan Partney two years ago that it was legal for Dave Partney to vote from Missouri Avenue. But Schooley said Dan Partney gave him the impression Dave Partney had some type of living quarters at the business.

Schooley has such facilities in his office, he said.

"Knowing what I know now," Schooley said under cross-examination, "I might tell him to ask a judge for a declaratory judgment."

Police urge drug tests

By Mike Myers Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Police officers here want to be tested for drugs.

An ordinance establishing a drug-abuse testing program, proposed by the police union, was presented to the City Council on Tuesday as part of a new manual of rules and regulations for the department.

The ordinance was unanimously placed on first reading.

The program would randomly test a specific number of officers each month. Eight drugs would be checked, according to Police Chief Don Knight, including cocaine and THC, the active ingredient in cannabis.

Knight said there has been no accusation of departmental drug abuse.

"I am contending there is nobody here using drugs," Knight said. "We're going to prove nobody is using them."

Knight said the union originally came to him with a drug-testing proposal.

"We wanted to avoid the unknown," said Lt. Dennis Chenuault, president of Local 1347 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which represents the police.

"We realized that, with the state law, the city could do whatever they wanted (regarding drug testing). We knew we were eventually going to have to take drug tests, so we wanted to get going, get a program lined out — one the city can live with and we can live with."

Chenuault said a committee, made up of Sgt. Jeff Parker and patrolmen Dennis Shemwell and Richard Miller, studied the testing programs of six or seven other police departments and refined parts of those programs into a proposal of their own.

"We don't tolerate (drug use). We don't feel we have anyone here to worry about (coming up positive)," Chenuault said.

Under the proposed plan, the testing would be done by SmithKline Bio-science Laboratories in St.

City-wide testing being considered

GRANITE CITY — There should be a drug-testing program for every city employee and elected official, 4th Ward Alderman Dan Partney told the City Council Tuesday.

Partney agrees with the drug-testing program proposed for the police department, and said he believes all elements of the city are as important as the police and should also be tested.

Assistant City Attorney Brian Konzen said there is a federal law covering armed law enforcement personnel that would not apply to, for example, sanitation workers driving garbage trucks.

Partney said a street department worker operating a snow plow could potentially be nearly as dangerous as a police officer with a gun. Konzen said a citywide ordinance could be written, but would be different from the one covering police.

The aldermen agreed to consider the idea and, by a voice vote, approved a motion by Partney to have the city legal staff prepare an ordinance establishing a drug-testing program for the city government.

Louis through St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Granite City. Knight said he is uncertain of the cost of testing, but that it is not prohibitive.

If a test came up positive, Knight said, there would be a second test to assure it was a true positive. The second positive would be followed by an investigation, during which the officer would have a chance to offer an explanation, and the investigation results would be turned over to the

'Hit list' skips Illinois bases

By Edward T. Hearn Staff writer

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Richard Cheney is ready to close 50 more U.S. military bases but Illinois officials say the state should ensure that bases in Illinois are not closed.

A top aide to Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Belleview, said in particular that the Charles Melvin Price Support Center in Granite City and Scott Air Force Base in Belleville would not appear on Cheney's list.

"I don't think they would be. The bases that are there have pretty sound missions," the Dixon aide said.

In recent years, the Price Center added overseas shipment of cars and trucks belonging to members of the armed forces to its mission and has expanded both its base housing facilities and base shopping facilities.

Cheney is expected on Monday to unveil the fiscal 1991 defense budget, a $292-billion spending plan. Separately, Cheney is expected to present legislation calling for the base closings.

Two bases in Illinois were ordered shut last year by Congress on the recommendation of a special Pentagon commission.

Before that panel presented its list, rumors were flying that the Price depot would be among the closures.

'There had better be some foreign bases on that list.'
—An aide to Sen. Alan Dixon

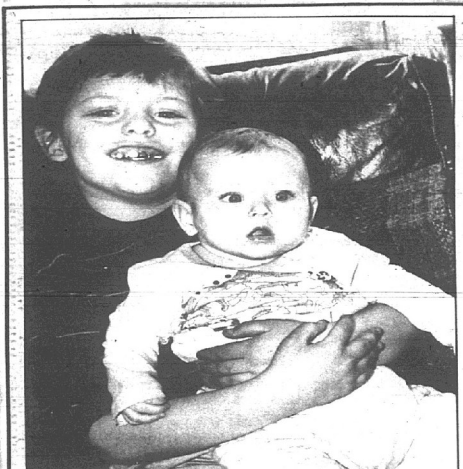

But Congress agreed to close Chanute Air Force Base in Rantoul and Fort Sheridan in the north Chicago suburbs, sparing the Granite City facility. Dixon, who serves on the Senate Armed Services Committee, has previously urged the Pentagon to include foreign bases on any new closure list.

"There had better be some foreign bases on that list," the Dixon aide said this week.

In recent weeks, Pentagon officials discussed with Dixon the possibility of establishing a new commission, but the senator said he would oppose a new panel.

"Our major argument has always been that the secretary of Defense has the authority to recommend base closures. He doesn't need a commission," the Dixon aide said.

The new base closings are part of an overall Pentagon cutback, which includes slashing 42,000 persons from the military and civilian payroll over the next five years. The cuts are intended to save $39 billion.

SEVEN-YEAR-OLD HERO Joshua Rohan holds his seven-month-old cousin, Patricia Paulin, whom he saved from choking on a coin.

7-year-old hero saves baby's life

By Meg Tebo Staff writer

MADISON — Seven-year-old Joshua Rohan is being called a hero: these days by his aunt, who is the mother of a baby girl that Josh saved from choking on a coin Sunday.

"My brother (5-year-old Jimmy Lee) came and told me that the baby was choking and I thought he was kidding."

"But then he said 'No, really' so I ran with him and she was choking bad and turning red. I picked her up and patted her on the back and then I gave her to her mom," said Josh, a first grader at Harris School in Madison.

"The ambulance guys said he definitely saved her life by keeping the coin higher up in her esophagus," said Esther Paulin, the baby's mother.

The baby is seven-month-old Patricia Paulin, who had swallowed a penny. She was hospitalized overnight after surgery to remove the coin from her throat, but was smiling and happy at home Monday afternoon.

"He's a hero," said Paulin, who is also the mother of another daughter, 4-year-old Heather.

Young Josh appeared quite nervous while talking to a reporter about his life-saving actions.

"Just relax and tell her what happened. Remember, you did a good thing, Josh," coached Patricia's uncle, Jim Cargill.

"I'm just happy," said Josh.

Clinton power plant gets mixed reviews

Performance at Illinois Power's Clinton Power Station has been satisfactory, according to a Nuclear Regulatory Commission report.

The Systematic Assessment of Licensee Performance (SALP) report — a critique of Clinton's performance by NRC inspection teams — graded Illinois Power's performance "good" during the opening and closing periods of the report.

But it said it was "poor" during a period when the plant was shut down for replacement of nuclear fuel and maintenance.

The NRC will discuss its findings with Illinois Power at a public meeting Jan. 26 at the Visitors' Center at Clinton.

The report covers a period from Sept. 1, 1988, to Oct. 31, 1989. During that time, Illinois Power restocked a portion of nuclear fuel in the reactor for the first time since the plant began operating in 1987. The plant was also shut down five times due to equipment failures.

"Overall, your performance was found to be satisfactory," A. Bert Davis, NRC Region III administrator, said in the report.

"For the most part, performance was found to be good during the beginning and end, and poor during the middle of the assessment period."

Clinton was evaluated in eight areas and graded by categories 1, 2 or 3, with category 1 being the highest.

The NRC awarded the company a 1 for emergency preparedness, a 2 in five areas and a 3 in two areas. Illinois Power was graded in seven categories in the 1988 SALP report, but the NRC added a category for performance during outages in this report.

"The NRC's report is objective, and points out the problems we had during the refueling outage in 1988," said J. Stephen Perry, vice president responsible for Illinois Power's nuclear program.

"We have already addressed a number of the concerns that the NRC had during its inspections."

"The report is a fair evaluation of our operations at Clinton, pointing out both our strengths and weaknesses," Perry said.

"The NRC expresses no concern about the safety of the plant or our ability to operate Clinton in a conservative manner."

NRC officials acknowledged Illinois Power's commitment to the safe operation of Clinton.

"During all operational events, the licensed staff demonstrated a conservative philosophy and positive control of the plant," the NRC said.

The NRC added, "The company's control of the plant while in operation and response to abnormal conditions was considered excellent."

Library looks at rear guard

By Meg Tebo

GRANITE CITY — The Granite City Library Board has asked the director to post a staff member at the library's rear door to help prevent theft, but the director said he might not have enough people to fulfill the request.

The rear door has had a desk installed for more than a year, but head librarian Robert Stack said budget constraints have prevented him from being able to hire someone to work at the desk.

He said he fears staff members who work elsewhere in the library would not be able to complete their paperwork if they were constantly approached by the public at that desk.

"I just don't see how it's possible right now," Stack told the board during a recent meeting.

"Well, just talk to your staff and we'll bring it up again at the next meeting," said Chairman Marshall Schroeder.

The issue had been raised by board member Ron Coleman, who was at the library one day when a man attempted to leave by that door without checking out the books he was carrying.

When confronted by library staff members, the man gave the books back. The board does not prosecute individuals who return pilfered items upon request.

The board also restated its position that bookmobile service to all School District 9 elementary schools will continue through the end of the '89-90 school year.

There had been some question as to whether the library could provide service to those students who do not live within the library district's boundaries.

Pending a final legal decision on that subject, the library has agreed to continue the service. Resolution is not expected before summer, officials said.

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

When a person sustains a personal injury and requests a jury trial, it is up to the jury to assess whether or not the person is injured and to determine what damages, if any, ought to be awarded. Sometimes there is disagreement with the amount of damages awarded.

In one recent case, a high school student who had attended the school's homecoming football game was walking through the parking lot when another student hit her with his truck. Although the plaintiff attended the homecoming festivities later that evening, she was in pain and her arm and knee were greatly swollen.

The plaintiff consulted with her family doctor twice after the accident. She stayed out of school for one week and wore a knee brace for two months thereafter. She did not consult another doctor, however, for almost nineteen months after her last visit with her family doctor.

She testified that even though she did not treat with a doctor for more than a year and a half, she nevertheless was forced to give up a number of activities that she had previously enjoyed. The condition of her knee made it difficult for her to jump, and she could not withstand strenuous activities. She had previously been a starting player on her high school varsity volleyball team, but she was forced to give this up as well as all intramural high school sports.

She later consulted with two more doctors who felt that she was not in need of surgery, and finally with a board-certified orthopedic surgeon who indicated that arthroscopic surgery was an option. At trial, the plaintiff introduced the testimony of the surgeon who indicated that surgery was an option while the defendant relied on the testimony of the other doctors who felt that her injury did not require surgery. The plaintiff had bills totaling over $600.00, but the jury only awarded her $300.00 in damages.

The plaintiff appealed the case arguing that the verdict was inadequate in that it failed to reflect the evidence offered to show pain and suffering. The Appellate Court noted that there was a conflict between the statements of the various doctors and that it was for the jury to assess what damages ought to be awarded. The Appellate Court felt that the nineteen month delay in treatment and the conflicting testimony of the doctors required that it not reverse the jury's finding in this matter.

Library won't go on own

Why doesn't Pontoon Beach just accept fact and try to become a part of a regional library district?

The need for this surfaced again recently when a volunteer librarian posted a note on the library's front door, stating that funds were needed to keep the facility from closing.

The librarian was not acting on the authority of her board members, but out of a concern that the building will probably close without more money. Her note took library and village officials by surprise and was quickly removed.

But we feel the message is loud and clear. Pontoon Beach voters refused to pay taxes to support the referendum last November, and so far donations are the only thing keeping the facility afloat.

Treasurer Judith Merritt told one of our reporters that the library has enough money to stay open through spring and is counting on upcoming fund-raisers to stay open longer.

That is a valiant effort for a community that prides itself on spirit, but you can't put off the bill collector forever.

Pontoon would have been much better off trying to become a part of the Granite City Library District, which is the subject of a vote in March. True, we may be putting the cart before the horse, since we don't know that the rest of the community will support the district concept. But if it does, Pontoon will watch the rest of the area reap the benefits of a well-established program, while struggling to keep what it's got.

Acid rain national problem

Acid rain harms people and wildlife and should be curtailed, the federal administration and lawmakers are convinced. A new clean-air law is seen as inevitable this year.

The problem is financing. When savings-and-loan failures occurred mainly in a couple of states, a national S&L bailout was ordered. It seems unfair to talk about saddling Illinois and other Midwestern states with the cost of new anti-pollution programs to benefit the East Coast and Canada.

A popular theory is that electric generating plants in this part of the country are mainly responsible for bad air that wafts to the east and north. But, as Illinois Power Co. is pointing out, enacting that theory into law could cost utility customers here up to $30 more a month.

It's ironic that the cost of IP's nuclear-powered Clinton station is blamed for rising power bills. Some opponents of those rate hikes say the nuclear plant really isn't needed, but the main alternative is coal-fired power plants that cause, you guessed it, acid rain.

Irony aside, Midwesterners regard it as inappropriate to shoulder the full cost of new pure-air goals, regardless of how worthy.

New opportunity for BAC

Still another opportunity has arisen to include a Granite City area resident on the board of Belleville Area College. It should not be ignored.

We have too many highly qualified people in the populous northern portion of College District 522 to go without a representative on the seven-member board.

In filling a similar vacancy in October, the board chose a Belleville resident, compounding an inequity that had prompted BAC voters in 1988 to order establishment of subdistricts for the election of trustees.

On Jan. 17, the board accepted the resignation of Van Smith, appointed for two years in 1987 to complete the term of Trustee Curtis Eckert. The Illinois Legislature last year voted two-year extensions for Smith and two other trustees. This avoided terminating any trustees in mid-term.

The extensions were authorized in full awareness that a new election method had been mandated. The people have spoken against at-large selection, and the board ought to heed the public's will.

Barry was own worst enemy

Maybe it's because I'm not black, but I don't feel sorry for Marion Barry.

The embattled black mayor of Washington, D.C., was stung by the FBI last week for alleged purchase of crack cocaine. It capped a nine-year rumor parade that first began when patrons of a D.C. nightclub reported seeing Barry use drugs.

Coming days are expected to bring more allegations as authorities unveil their case.

Benjamin Hooks, leader of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, would have you believe this was a racially motivated attack, but Hooks' bluster merely shows how race can be used to muddy an issue in silly ways.

This was not a black problem; this was not a white problem. This was a human problem. And acknowledgment of that came this week with Barry's self-admission into a drug rehabilitation clinic in Florida.

This issue goes far deeper than race. Washington, D.C., is the nation's drug scourge, and Barry, all this time the purported leader, turned out to be merely a part of the crowd. He was going to announce his quest for a fourth term as mayor last Sunday, but found himself fighting a much bigger battle — owning up to a weakness.

Barry is not a white man, but the press has handled him no differently than some of his counterparts. Consider Gary Hart, John Ford and Willie Wright. They were brought down by human weaknesses, among them women and power. All were white Washington D.C. politicians who deserved the attention of the press. However, no one cried "race" when the cameras zoomed in on them.

Like the others, Barry offered the same evasive tactics, using denial as defense. Now, the mayor has asked to "be left in peace" during his time in rehabilitation. The cameras are unlikely to probe the corridors of his clinic, but they will continue to probe his past.

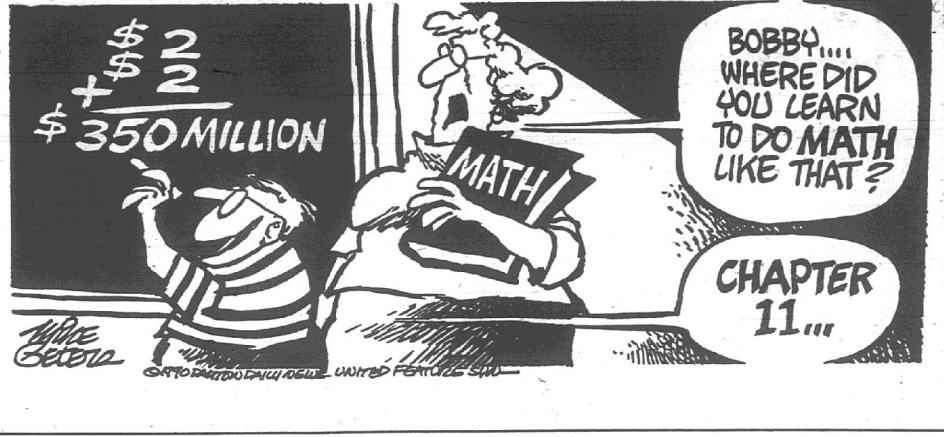

Just as Barry has let his city go to pot ... and cocaine ... so has he let down the nation's capital in terms of character. For years he has apparently lied about drug-related problems and kept office in spite of himself.

But remove the drug issue from Barry's record as mayor and he still would not be worth re-electing. His arrogance has continued to breed contempt among the voters. And as murder has reached new peaks in the city, it is doubtful that his constituents would feel secure in giving him four more years.

This raises the question of his successor. Personally I would like to see Jesse Jackson be the next mayor of the city. It is likely this man will continue to want to be President, and if there is any chance of that, I would like to see how he fares at political office first.

Washington, D.C., it seems, would be the ultimate test of leadership.

Day care enhanced by good parents, providers

To the editor:

I am an in-home day care provider and a former teacher in a day care center.

Over the past year I have read many articles concerning day care. In them were information and guidelines for choosing the best care for your children.

The DCF's (Illinois Department of Children and Family Services) requires all licensed day care providers to give all new parents a pamphlet. It is titled, "Choosing and Evaluating Day Care Homes."

In it are some of the rules and regulations for licensed homes.

It also contains a complaint form. If parents should have a complaint or feel a rule is being violated, they can simply fill out and mail in this form.

I am glad to see parents getting this important information. I have no problem giving my new parents the DCF's pamphlet. Every child deserves good, quality day care.

But, speaking as a day care provider, I would like to see a pamphlet to go along with the one from DCF's. It would be titled, "How to Keep Good Day Care." It would contain the following guidelines:

1. Pay your provider on time. You expect your check on time. So does she.

2. Be on time when dropping off and especially when picking up your children. Most providers put in very long hours. Don't expect them to watch your child when you go out for a drink after work.

3. If your child will not be coming, let your provider know. She may be holding up activities, waiting for your child.

4. If your schedule varies, let your provider know your hours at the beginning of the week. She needs to plan her week accordingly.

5. Fill out all requested forms, as soon as possible. Licensed providers are required to keep a file on your child. Their case-workers do come by and check.

6. Treat your provider with respect. "Thank you" cannot be said enough.

An irresponsible, unreliable parent can turn an enjoyable job into a real nightmare. Communication and cooperation between parent and provider are essential parts of day care. Day care is at its best when there is mutual respect.

Alzheimer's has line on state income tax form

To the editor:

For the fifth consecutive year, Illinois taxpayers have an opportunity to help unravel the medical mystery of the degenerative brain disease called Alzheimer's, just by filling in line 11c on their state income tax forms.

In the past four years, more than $600,000 has been donated to Alzheimer's research through the generosity of Illinois taxpayers. This has been awarded to 29 Illinois research projects — at Loyola, the University of Chicago, Southern Illinois University School of Medicine, Northwestern University, University of Illinois College of Medicine at Rockford, Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center and Rush University College of Nursing.

Alzheimer's afflicts more than 10 percent of those over age 65, or more than 150,000 Illinoisans. It causes gradual memory loss, personality changes, and total helplessness before it kills.

There are no cures, vaccines or preventive measures that can be taken to avoid Alzheimer's. The only hope for victims and their families is continuing support of research to find a cure.

We are again asking and urging Illinoisans to help continue the research, by writing in the amount they wish to donate on line 11c of their 1989 state income tax forms.

In previous years, contributions were limited to $10 per taxpayer, and only those receiving refunds were allowed to donate through the checkoff. This year, however, everyone who files a state tax return may donate, and there is no limit on the amount (although the minimum donation is $1).

The contribution indicated on line 11c will either decrease the taxpayer's refund or increase the balance due.

Illinois was the first state to support Alzheimer's research through a checkoff system. The generosity of citizens during the past four years is a strong indication they want to assist in discovering a way to end the tragedy of Alzheimer's.

Scott joint-use presents opportunities for region

To the editor:

The proposed Scott Joint Use Airport is giving Southwest Illinois residents a rare opportunity to determine the course of our economic future.

This is a refreshing breath of fresh air compared to the "wait and see" attitude that has its reign over Metro East for several years. Complacency only benefits St. Louis County while many jobs and residents migrate out of our area.

As a young businessman and resident of the Belleville area, I welcome this shot at progress. We have the opportunity to say yes to new million additional dollars that would be spent in our cities and villages.

It would also create more than 5,000 jobs. The majority of these are not minimum-wage jobs; they are well-paying skilled blue- and white-collar construction and airport management jobs.

This should be welcome news in the wake of threatened layoffs in the coal and manufacturing industries. It should be welcome to a lot of the younger people who currently have to look across the river for employment. Look at the flow of traffic at rush-hour!

Most of us agree there are still many unanswered questions regarding this project. As in any growth, planning is essential. When the airport does become a reality, those who support it hope those who didn't can join us for the tremendous task of planning growth and expansion.

If planned properly, the positive effects of this project will far outweigh the negatives and Belleville, Mascoutah, O'Fallon and other surrounding communities will retain the charm that brought us here, as well as the progress that will keep us here.

DARE earns Costello praise

To the editor:

I want to offer my congratulations and express my pride to those sixth grade students in Granite City who recently completed the DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program.

I attended the graduation to meet and thank the students who are dedicated to helping other young people resist drugs. The entire DARE effort represents an arduous attempt to increase public awareness about the dangers of drugs. The DARE program is vitally important.

Broken dreams

Driving desire for senior complex bogged down by financial reality

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Margaret Belt did her best to hide her feelings as she greeted her guest in the living room of her apartment in the 1200 block of Niedringhaus Avenue.

But the tears that were just below the surface leaked out occasionally as she talked.

"I don't want to move," she said. "I'm happy here — this is where old people belong — downtown, close to everything. You've got to do something."

Belt is the only resident of a planned downtown senior citizen complex that has been the dream of Darrell Crews since 1975. The block-long building, which also houses an apartment for Crews and his family, has gone into foreclosure.

"I told Mrs. Belt I don't know what's going to happen," Crews said. "So she has found another place to live. I guess that's what it's come to. It's entirely possible I'm going to end up on the street with no place for me and my family to live."

"But I'm not going to go quietly. So, before this all ends up as a newspaper story about the desperate actions of an insane person, I want to tell my story."

Crews renovated his first house, located in the downtown neighborhood, in 1965.

"I was way before the Downtown Restoration Society," he said. "I had a hard time convincing the banks and savings and loans you could make money at it. I was getting 'low-balled' on appraisals and even then showing a profit."

"But the financial people said the money just wasn't there to fix up old houses. I guess they were more interested in the (questionable loan) schemes we are bailing them out for now."

Several Downtown Restoration members, who asked not to be identified, have echoed Crews' experience with lending institutions. Crews said he ultimately convinced a local bank it was possible to make money fixing up old houses by compiling the history of one of his houses and showing how it appreciated in value during a number of sales over a period of years.

"Still, when an appraisal was made for the bank it was less than the selling price," Crews said.

During the next 10 years, Crews completely renovated approximately eight more houses in the area and worked on several others. He ultimately was able to quit his job at Granite City Steel and make renovation his full-time job.

Around 1975, Crews found himself facing a dilemma he said is being encountered by more people every day.

"My mother got ill and it became apparent she wasn't going to be able to take care of herself," Crews said. "I started looking into retirement homes and I found a lot of nice places. But they were out in the country, surrounded by green pastures, like some young person's idea of retirement."

"I talked to a lot of people in these places and they complained they missed being close to their friends, their church, the stores, the library — all the things they had grown up with and lived near their entire life."

"That's when I got the idea for building a place downtown, close to all these things, so older people wouldn't have to move out into the country."

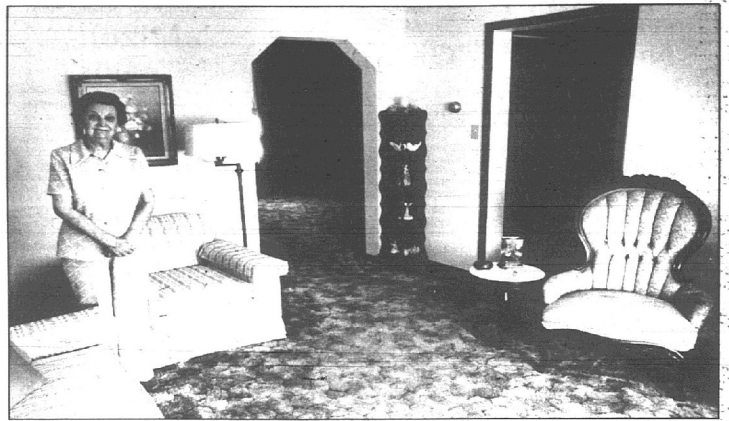

Crews began researching senior citizen housing. He found both state and federal funds were theoretically available for the type of project he was planning. At the same time he found the building on Niedringhaus Avenue.

Getting state or federal money required getting the city to back him, and Crews was unsuccessful in selling the idea to the city.

He said no one ever came right out and said it, but he suspected racism was in the back of the city's mind — taking federal or state money for housing project would require it to be open to all races. But Crews was convinced his idea was right so, in 1976, he bought the building for $65,000, determined to turn it into senior citizen housing on his own, if necessary.

The project didn't get started in time to help his mother — Crews ended up building an apartment for a live-in family member.

"But Mrs. Belt, a family friend, heard us discussing our plans with my mother and she said it was what she wanted," Crews said. "She was even willing to invest her own money in the project."

MARGARET BELT stands in the living room of her apartment, a model for the complex.

Crews moved into the building and built an apartment for Belt. He continued to try to sell his idea to anyone who would listen.

An architect was so impressed with the idea he drew up plans, not just for Crews' building, but for the connecting building, now occupied by Henry Burns Furniture, and its connecting wing on Delmar Avenue.

The wings, raised from two to three stories, would be apartments connected to a restaurant and shops in the Burns building.

Based on this larger plan, Crews bought two houses behind his building on Cleveland Boulevard.

Crews said he got a lot of positive reaction to his plan as he shopped it around, but not from lending institutions.

When applying for state or federal money, he said, he ran into the same roadblock as before. Money is generally available only to projects backed by a municipality or another taxing body.

In order to keep making his mortgage payments, Crews built specialized apartments for the Madison County Association for Retarded Persons in part of the building. The association agreed to make the annual rent payment in a lump sum so Crews could pay off the costs of renovation.

When the time came, however, the association told Crews it was unable to make the payment and made monthly payments instead. Crews was forced to give up his first mortgage and took out another loan on the building at a much higher interest rate.

To meet the new financial obligations, Crews built another set of specialized apartments for Mental Health Services of Southern Madison County with an understanding the lease would be long-term because the apartments would not be readily suitable for another tenant.

The two sets of tenants didn't get along, and key management personnel in the groups changed. For a lot of reasons, including ongoing legal entanglements, Crews in 1985 found himself without tenants.

Crews tried again to sell his idea to the city. Newly-elected Mayor Von Dee Cruise spent several hours discussing plans with Crews and promised to try to help.

"I still would like to help Darrell," Mayor Cruise said recently. "I wish there were some way to get him a low-interest loan or something. I think he has good ideas, but things haven't worked out for him."

No money has ever been sent Crews' way and he said two recent examples of the city's spending of federal Community Development money make him particularly angry.

"I would really like to have a picture of Mrs. Belt with (U.S. Rep.) Jerry Costello on the new sidewalk in front of his office so he can explain to her why there is federal money to pay for the sidewalk, but not for a place for her to live," Crews said.

"... And, you know those buildings on Cleveland? The city couldn't get me any money for renovation, but now they can get me Community Development money to tear them down. Does that make sense?"

Crews still hopes his building will someday be senior citizen housing. He said the current position is that the bank says he has no equity in the building and the value of the building is not enough to cover the loan, so the bank will "eat the cost" if he will sign over the building.

If the bank is going to be that magnanimous, taking the loss they say, why couldn't they give the building to the city and have the city make something out of it?" Crews asked. "The building is set up to just drop in senior citizen apartments. Mrs. Belt's apartment shows what can be done. There is nothing wrong with the idea; I have to believe there is a way to make it work."

Banking officials confirmed longtime dealings with the developer, but declined to comment for the record.

Crews admits he is bitter. "I read a newspaper story about a guy who shot a loan officer and I'll admit I felt some sympathy for him," he said.

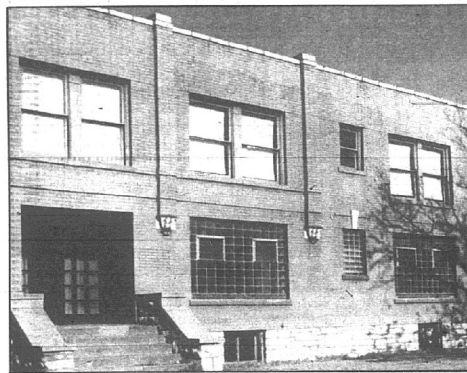

Considering the cost the project has to his family, Crews probably wouldn't try the project again.

But I was watching on TV the other night about the civil rights movement and, like Martin Luther King, I have to believe there are some things in life that are worth making sacrifices for," Crews said.

"I have to believe some things in life are so important it is worth getting your head bashed for them."

Growing violence against journalists in Mexico, Colombia, elsewhere

The murder of a former Quad Cityan this winter brought to local attention the fact that New York authorizes the death penalty only in the event that a criminal has murdered a policeman or corrections officer.

The fabric of a civilized society obviously is damaged when its ultimate line of defense, the police force, is placed under attack.

In addition, it seems to me that violence against editors, reporters and commentators also constitutes a direct assault on freedom.

A democracy can function well only when its electorate has an opportunity to keep informed, not only through word of mouth, but through independent news outlets, such as newspapers, magazines and broadcasting stations.

IT IS SAID mostly as a joke — perhaps a bit of "gallows humor" — but reporters going out to cover a story often say that one of their goals is to "survive the assignment."

Unfortunately, it isn't always possible to do so.

In 1989, a record number of 63 journalists lost their lives in the line of duty.

IN THE LAST 12 months, slayings of news men and women occurred in 22 countries.

Attacks and harassment more than doubled, to 1,045 in 84 nations. During 1988, the figures were 465 attacks in 70 countries.

The statistics were compiled by Freedom House, a human rights monitoring group in New York.

ONLY 56 NATIONS among 159 surveyed had press freedom in 1989. Fifty-seven had been rated as having a free press in 1988.

Nations with partly free media, meanwhile, increased from 19 to 29. Countries whose media is not free decreased from 83 in 1988 to 74 in 1989.

The 63 journalists murdered last year represented a 37 percent increase over 1988, when "only" 46 were killed. These are astonishingly large numbers, but they have been verified.

MORE THAN HALF of the murders occurred in Latin America as a result of drug- or guerrilla-related violence. In Colombia alone last year, 19 journalists were slain by drug traffickers.

During the last decade in Colombia, narcotics activity took the lives of 86 journalists covering the drug war.

Special interest by U.S. President George Bush in Colombia's drug problems seems warranted, in view of the heavy loss of life and the adverse impact of Colombian drug shipments on the United States.

"WHEN TERRORISM targets the press, it does more than kill journalists," a Freedom House spokesman points out.

It casts a pall of self-censorship and despair over the whole society."

Other dangerous places to report the news in 1989 included Peru, with seven deaths; Sri Lanka and Iran, five murders each; and Brazil and El Salvador, four slayings each.

THE CHILLING EFFECT noted above harms everyone, not just members of the news media. All citizens suffer when a free flow of factual information to the public is impeded.

Mighty close to home, the threat of death currently is casting a heavy shadow over reporters south of the United States-Mexico border.

The U.S. and Mexican systems of journalism are said to differ as much as baseball and bullfighting.

With 44 of their number killed in the 1980s, journalists in Mexico feel they are en la mira de los sicarios — in the gunsight of hired killers.

"THERE IS A LACK of legal machinery to protect journalists," says Jesus Pavia, a reporter for Jueves, the magazine of Excelsior, a daily newspaper published in Mexico City.

"Murder of journalists, of course, is the ultimate violation of press freedom, the most extreme and final form of censorship," in the opinion of Bill Williamson, executive director of the Inter American Press Association in Miami.

He adds, "It's happening much too often, especially in Mexico and Colombia."

"THE DISTURBING INCREASE in the number of killings of journalists in Mexico" was cited by Article 19, an international human rights organization in London, in its July 1989 report, The Mass Media and Censorship in Mexico.

It said the increase in such murders "continues to be the single most serious challenge to freedom of the press in that country."

Ricardo Castillo, international news editor for the Mexico City News and a 17-year veteran journalist, says:

"If a Mexican journalist writes about political corruption, illegal arms dealing or illegal drugs, he in turn is exposing himself to violent reprisals..."

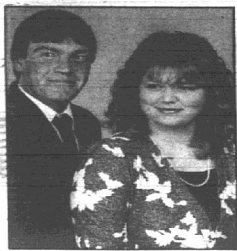

"DIRECT REPRISALS from those he writes about and exposes. The 1980s were the worst ever for journalists in Mexico."

The Mellon Foundation and Editor & Publisher magazine are among those doing a good job of spotlighting these trends.

I hope they keep it up, and that growing world awareness of what is occurring will aid in reversing the sinister pattern of events.

This suppression of intellectual and political debate must be fought and defeated.

Community, university leaders will teach student leadership

University and community leaders are conducting student leadership development modules during the winter quarter at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

The Student Leadership Development Program (SLDP), in its third year on the SIUE campus, has three components: leadership modules (scheduled Tuesdays during the quarter at 2:30 and 7 p.m. in the Mississippi-Illinois Room of SIUE's University Center) which offer discussion with SIUE faculty, staff and alumni and community leaders; active citizenship component which is project-oriented; and a university and community service component which is largely service-oriented.

Those who complete two parts of the three-part program receive an SLDP transcript.

Participants in the human relations module will learn about the importance of sensitivity with the work group. Discussion will focus on assuming the role

Partneys

Scroggins told the jurors, "If you believe Bill Schooley and I fabricated our stories solely for the sake of this trial, then you should find them guilty."

"But if you believe they were given that advice, then you must find them innocent," Scroggins reiterated what he had said in his opening arguments.

"We're here on a political witch hunt,"

Stevens testified he had been at the Precinct 8 polling place, Prather School, on April 4, 1969, delivering absentee ballots, which is one of the official capacities of the city clerk. As clerk, Stevens formerly conducted elections in Granite City until the law was changed to vest such power in the county clerk, he testified.

Stevens' visit coincided with Perjak's challenge of Don Partney's ballot, Stevens said. At that time Dan Partney asked Stevens whether he thought it was legal. Stevens said he had no right to offer an opinion, but did tell Partney that he believed a former editor of the Press-Record used to vote from 1815 Delmar Ave., the address of the newspaper.

Haine's former law partner Bono was called to establish that a friend of the state's attorney himself lived at one place and voted from another.

During testimony, Bono acknowledged that his wife and family live in Florida because their son has severe allergies. Bono said he commutes back and forth and votes in Wood River Township. Bono testified he does reside in a two-bedroom Bethalto apartment which he maintains as his legal residence.

Scroggins said he had been told by the clerk of Sarasota County that the Bonos had established their residence in Osprey, Fla., as a legal residence for tax purposes. Bono said he could not remember signing any such document.

Madison County Clerk Evelyn Bowles, called as a prosecution witness, testified that Don Partney was a deputy voting registrar. She noted that such registrars are trained on legal requirements regarding voting residency.

Dan Partney testified he received no such training. Rybak later called a rebuttal witness, Deputy Clerk Doris Talick, who said Partney would have to have had such training before being sworn in as a registrar. She produced the oath Partney had signed, but she said she had not administered the training.

Talick also produced a sheet of guidelines for those who administer the training. The only reference of any kind to residency on the sheet was, "You must have two types of identification. One must have the correct address on it."

Judge Maddux attached to her sheet of instructions to the jurors two sections from the Illinois Revised Statutes pertaining to voting eligibility, Chapter 46, Article 3, Section 1 says voters must be residents of an election district for at least 30 days preceding an election.

Chapter 46-3-2 says, "A permanent abode is necessary to constitute a residence within the meaning of Section 3-1."

police chief.

The chief would decide what, if any, disciplinary action to take. If the chief felt the case merited it, he could file charges and refer the case to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners.

"Probably each case would go through the fire and police commissioners," Knight said. "But a more benevolent punishment is always a possibility."

Knight said he "really believes in" the proposed testing program and said it is important for the public image of the department.

Psalm 138:3 ... "In the day when I cried thou answeredst me, and strengthenedst me strength in my soul."

There is an underlying feeling of deep humility and sincerity in David's words. "When I cried unto thee," He seems to imply all pretense is dropped. This is not mere formality in a religious exercise. David needed help from God.

There is ample proof in the Scriptures that God answers prayer. Jesus said, "Ask, and you shall receive; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

God answered David's prayer and sent strength unto his soul. He gave him help in the inward man where it really counts! When you pray, when you get the answer, when you are strengthened, then it is easy to believe that you can do all things through Christ which strengthens you!

When we pray without pretense, when we expect an answer, God will not fail us. He will meet our needs. Pray to Him. Today.

Granite City becomes Cahokia's first victim

By Mike Kelly
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Well it finally happened!

The Comanches, winless in 14 games this season, finally got rewarded and picked up their first win of the year on Tuesday at Granite City by defeating the Warriors 80-70 in overtime.

Unlike the past, Cahokia wouldn't be denied. The Comanches fought for everything they got. But Granite City (9-7) lent a helping hand by committing 16 turnovers, while blowing a 12 point lead early in the third quarter.

Leading 37-25 with 6:45 to play in the period, Cahokia rattled off a 14 point run and took a 39-37 lead. The Warriors, thanks to a pair of three point bombs by Matt Cook and Bob Thomas, regained the lead, 43-39. But the Comanches, led by Emmanuel Rogers who scored 31 points and hauled down 17 rebounds, outscored the Warriors 11-4 and took the lead for good—50-47—with 4:54 to play in the game.

Granite City was forced to play from behind the rest of the way. They were bailed out by Brian Smith (17 points) in regulation time as his lay-up with seven seconds left tied the game at 60-60. But Rogers and Brian Karvinen (11 points and 11 assists) took over in the extra session.

Hurlie Cozart (13 points) nailed a three pointer on a feed from Karvinen to open the period. Then Karvinen stole the inbound pass, scored and was fouled by John Van Buskirk. Karvinen nailed the freethrow to complete the three point play and Cahokia had a six point cushion and never looked back.

"We got a comfortable lead on them and then the guys just got lazy," said Granite City coach Bill Ohlendorf. "We were just standing around and quit attacking the basket. Their speed eventually overwhelmed us and we wound up at their mercy for the remainder of the game."

"Cahokia is a good ball club and their much better than their record indicates, but we were more responsible for our own self-destruction than they were. It's a poor effort and definitely our low point of the season. We don't feel very good about being their first victim of the season."

While the Warriors lamented their loss, the Cahokia locker room was filled with joy. It was as if the Comanches had won the state championship. Coach John Latta was drenched with a water bottle, team pictures were taken and the feeling of fulfillment echoed among the players.

"I can say is that I'm excited," said Rogers. "It's simply a great feeling of satisfaction."

"This is what we've been waiting for all season," said Karvinen. "We just did what JEFF SMITH had 20 points and 19 rebounds, but the Warriors couldn't avoid being Cahokia's first victim of the season.

we've been doing all year, but this time we made our freethrows down the stretch. This is what we needed to pump up our confidence. Now we can carry this momentum for the rest of the season and into the regionals."

The Comanches were very accurate from the line. They made 23 out of 30 attempts, including 11-13 in overtime. Rogers and Karvinen did the bulk of the damage by making all the

"We knew it in our hearts," said Cozart. "We felt from the beginning of the game that we could beat Granite City. That's why we didn't wilt down the stretch. The guys got it together in practice this week and we worked real hard to get this win. We really wanted this one. And with the way Brian and Emmanuel were playing towards the end of the game, it got me all pumped up when I came into the game off the bench. We deserved to win this game."

"It's time for us to start breaking some other people's hearts after all the tough games we lost," said Kevin Brown, who finished with four points and five steals. "The bench was responsible for this win. Hurlie came in for me and helped us with his outside shooting and his defense. It's exciting, I just can't explain it. I feel like we just won the world championship."

"I couldn't be any happier if we had won the state title," said Latta. "This is a great group of kids and they deserve all the credit for this win. I'm very pleased with the effort."

The game didn't start very well for the Comanches as the Warriors used their size inside to take an early lead. Jeff Smith (20 points and 19 rebounds) was the culprit as he constantly made a pest of himself in the lane. Trailing 15-14 at the quarter, Granite City rallied to lead 31-25 at the intermission. But Smith picked up his fourth foul late in the third quarter and that allowed Cahokia to take control of the game.

"This loss puts us back a few steps," said Ohlendorf. "How far, I really don't know? But it's a disappointing loss and our kids aren't pleased about it. We weren't mentally sharp and I'm not making excuses for what happened. But this was a game we shouldn't have lost. We'll just have to go back to the drawing board and see what happens in our next game."

The Warriors travel to Belleville over the weekend for games against Althoff on Friday and Belleville East on Saturday. Junior varsity action gets under way at 6:15 p.m.

Impatience hurts Lady Warriors in loss to Lancers lays off in the long run. Jennifer Cavaness had her worst game in two years and the Lady Warriors suffered in the long run on Tuesday by losing 55-44 to Belleville East in a Southwestern Conference game.

Cavaness, the leading scorer in the area with better than 22 point average, was limited to nine points as Granite City (13-4 overall and 5-3 in the SWC) lost its third straight game to Belleville school this season. About the only bright spot for the Lady Warriors was that Sykes who poured in a game high 17 points.

Sykes was about the only accurate shooter on the floor wearing a red uniform. She made seven of 11 attempts, while the rest of her teammates were tepid and made 20 percent of their shots. Belleville East (13-6, 5-3), which tied Granite City for second place in the conference standings, constantly frustrated Cavaness with a strong double teaming defense in the lane.

The strategy worked to perfection as Cavaness, normally an accurate shooter from the floor, was only 4-19 from the field. Belleville's stingy defense and Granite City's impatience allowed the Lancers to lead from the outset, while building a comfortable 13 point lead (32-19) at the intermission.

Granite City made a run in the third quarter and cut the lead to six—43-37—with about a minute to go, but Belleville East shut the door in the fourth quarter. But, instead of blaming the loss on Belleville's mystic over Granite City in girls athletics, coach Allen Lobdell felt impatience was the major factor in the loss.

"Maybe from a player's point of view, the Belleville schools have some type of hex on our girls programs," said Lobdell. "But we always seem to struggle against the well coached teams. We seem to get impatient if it takes more than just a couple of passes to score. The good defense teams just frustrate us because we become impatient on the offensive end of the court."

"And I would say, being in my first year of coaching basketball, that it could be partly my fault because maybe I'm not seeing, or I'm neglecting something in practice. And I must be critical on myself because it's the only way we're going to grow as a team. We must learn from our mistakes."

"Now I'm not saying that I'm fully responsible for what's happening on the floor, but like all good teams we must share the blame. The key to success in this game is patience and we just haven't achieved it yet. Hopefully, it will come in time."

"But Belleville East did a good job on Jennifer. They completely took her out of the offense and she aided the cause by forcing a lot of shots from in close that she would normally make. But no one else picked up the slack. Except for Sykes, we just didn't get the job done."

Priscilla Meyenburg joined Cavaness in the inaccuracy department as the forward was limited to five points on 2-10 shooting.

"We had some opportunities," said Lobdell. "Some of the shots we missed were in our range, but the girls fell behind, panicked and forced many of their attempts. It was simply a long night for all of us."

The Lady Warriors travel to East St. Louis for a SWC game tonight. The Flyerettes are having problems of their own, while riding a 16 game losing streak. Junior varsity action gets under way at 6:15 p.m.

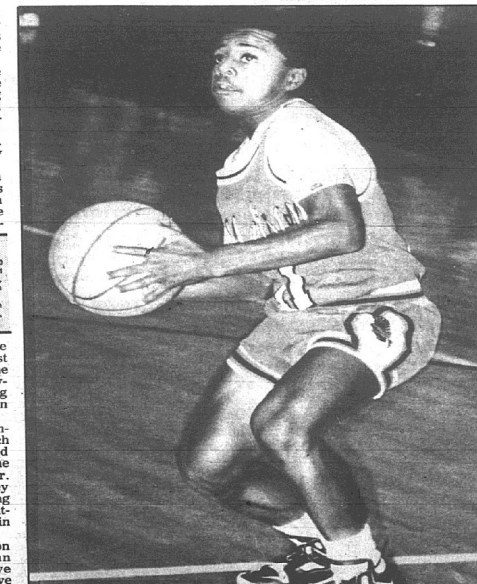

JENNIFER CAVANESS had her worst performance in two years. The high scoring senior was limited to nine points on Tuesday night.

Lebanon out guns Madison

LEBANON — The Trojans ran into red-hot Lebanon on Tuesday and lost 91-80. But the game was much closer than the final score indicates.

Trailing 45-36 at halftime, the Trojans (7-7) put together a nine point run, while keeping Lebanon scoreless in the third quarter and tied the score, 45-45. But the Greyhounds (16-2-2) regrouped and regained the lead. Madison was then forced to play from behind the rest of the way.

Part of Madison's problem was defense. While the Trojans applied a strong man-to-man defense and pressed the entire game, Lebanon was able to penetrate the lane to hit some clutch baskets when the contest was on the line. And when the lane was shut off, the Greyhounds relied on their strong outside shooting to nail down five three-pointers.

"(Lebanon) is a strong offensive team," said Madison coach Al Collins. "They're all good shooters, but their passing is the key to their success on the floor. They penetrate well, but they also do a good job of dropping the ball off to the open man outside. And that really hurt us in the clutch."

Steve Schieppe led Lebanon with 32 points, while Brian Leehring had 24 and Steve Ogden added 18 points and five steals. Andre May led Madison with 30 points as the Trojans placed five players in double fig-

Cardinal Ritter squeaks by Venice

ST. LOUIS — Cardinal Ritter rallied from a seven point deficit in the final three minutes on Tuesday and defeated Venice 75-73.

Trailing 60-57 going into the fourth quarter, the Red Devils (16-5) managed to regain the lead midway through the period. But Cardinal Ritter, led by Julian Winfield (the son of St. Louis University assistant coach Lee Winfield) who poured in a game high 31 points, outscored Venice 25-16 in the final period to seal the victory.

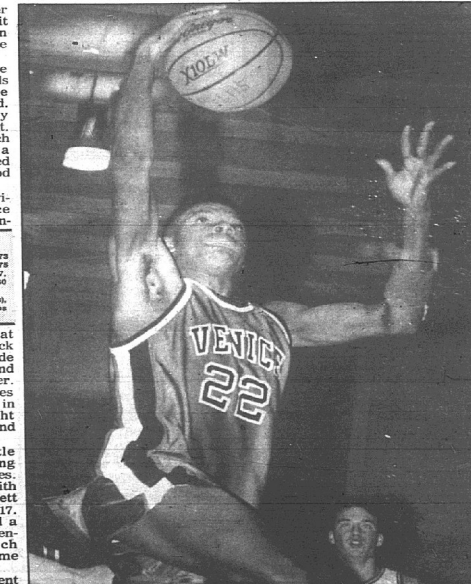

"Winfield is definitely a Division I player," said Venice coach Clinton Harris. "We managed to stop his penetration at times, but the kids is so quick that he was able to slip inside the seams of our defense. And he's also a tremendous jumper. There were a couple of times where we had him boxed out in the lane, but he jumped right over our people for the rebound or the putback basket."

Venice showcased a little offense of its own by placing three players in double figures. Doug Johnson led the way with 21 points, while Ervin Claggett had 20 and John White added 17. But a couple of turnovers and a couple of calls went against Venice down the stretch, which allowed Cardinal Ritter to come from behind.

"There were some judgement calls down the stretch that turned the game around," said Harris. (See VENICE Page 2B) ures, but it wasn't enough. "Lebanon is averaging 84 points per game," said Collins. "And they scored 91 against us, but I feel our defense didn't play all that bad. We caught them early in the second half when they built a nine point lead on us. But, once we got back into the game, we got lazy on defense and it hurt our comeback."

"We pressed the entire game and played straight up man-to-man against them. But some of our kids forgot their assignments and that cost us in the lane because they just started waltzing inside for the easy baskets. I know Lebanon has the reputation of scoring a lot of points and that they're having a dream season, but we should have neutralized them with our quickness."

"We're much quicker than them, so we should be able to shut off a lot of that stuff. But our guys aren't reacting in time. We're picking up too many reach in, or behind the back fouls. That in turn puts them at the free throw line and there's no defense against that kind of shot."

The Trojans were whistled for 20 fouls, which allowed Lebanon to can 24 free throws. On the other hand, Madison only made two free throws for the entire game.

"Basketball is a game of instinct and our guys are just thinking too much on the floor," said Collins. "You must come out instinctively and meet the challenge head on. It's based on reaction, instead of trying to think things out at times. But we have to make our own breaks and the kids gave it all they had. And with a couple of breaks here and there, we could have possibly won this game. We played well and I believe we could beat Lebanon on a neutral court."

The Trojans and Lebanon will probably hook up again at the Freeburg Regional next month. In the meantime, the Trojans return to action on Friday night when they host Okawville. Junior varsity action gets under way at 6:00 p.m.

ris. "And we also hurt ourselves with some turnovers. But overall, it was a solid team effort. Despite the loss, I was real pleased with the way my kids played."

"And we're going to need help from our bench, if we're to make a move in the regionals. Our bench people gave us some good minutes, but our guards, Reno Mosby and Winston Webb, just need a little more playing time. But I'm satisfied with this group. These guys play well together and they don't take things lying down."

After the opening period ended in an 18-16 tie, Venice erupted for 23 points in the second quarter and took a 41-35 lead. But Cardinal Ritter came on strong in the second half to win the game.

The Red Devils host Math & Science of St. Louis tonight. Junior varsity action gets under way at 6:00 p.m.

Century 21 official predicts lower rates

IRVINE, Calif. — Homebuyers can anticipate continued appreciation and lower mortgage rates in 1990, according to Richard J. Loughlin, president and chief executive officer of Century 21 Real Estate Corp.

"Home values will generally appreciate by 5 to 6 percent in 1990, with an estimated inflation rate of 4 percent," predicted Loughlin during a nationally televised interview. "The health of the real estate industry is certainly dependent on the overall economic health of the United States. Short of a deep recession, I don't foresee any significant decrease in the value of property, anywhere in the country."

"We anticipate 30-year fixed rate mortgages to run in the 8½ to 10½ percent range throughout 1990. We're going to see the Federal Reserve Board continue to try to loosen interest rates to stay away from a recession," said Loughlin.

Although new housing starts dropped in 1989, Loughlin said lower interest rates could lead to increased construction of new homes in 1990. He was also positive about the existing home market in the upcoming year. "There are more than two million properties on the market today throughout the United States. This inventory should satisfy every economic level of buyer."

Loughlin advised buyers not to wait for the "ideal time" to purchase a home. "Some people try to wait for interest rates to come down, which usually triggers a price increase," Loughlin said. "If people have the means to buy and they're really in the marketplace, they should go out and buy in order to benefit from the long-term growth in property values."

Responding to the plight of the first-time buyer, Loughlin noted, "It is more difficult today than it was 15 or 20 years ago for the first-time buyer, but it's not impossible. About one third of the total transactions completed by the Century 21 system each year involve first-time buyers. They may have to look farther to work, but today's first-time buyers are moving into rather nice homes."

Richard Loughlin was appointed president and CEO of Century 21 Real Estate Corp. in 1981. The company, headquartered in Irvine, Calif., is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Metropolitan Life Co., reputed to be the largest real estate group in the world.

Cruise at his best in 'Fourth Of July'

Tom Cruise broke the sound barrier in "Top Gun." Now Cruise breaks the pretty-boy barrier in "Born on the Fourth of July," a film of uncompromising frankness that should unanimously disturb the legions of Cruise devotees who haven't seen their hero face up to anything tougher than a cold sweat.

Based on the book of the same title by Vietnam veteran Ron Kovic, "Born on the Fourth of July" essentially is a chronicle of Kovic's experiences over a 20-year period from his high school days in the small town of Massapequa, N.Y., to his appearance in a wheelchair at the Democratic National Convention in the summer of 1976.

Directed by Oliver Stone, "Salvador," "Platoon" who is a Vietnam veteran himself, the film continues Stone's seemingly unquenchable thirst to manifest his own emotional scars from the war and to continually preach the absurdities and great harm caused by the conflict. At times "Born on the Fourth of July" is more a sermon than a story.

The validity of the message never is in question. The heavy-handed, shock value delivery is, Stone does not seem to believe that eloquence is poorly measured in terms of decibel levels, blood-letting and biological misfunctions.

Cruise gives the performance of his young career as Kovic, the all-American boy whose red, white and blue patriotism and competitive spirit thrust him into the Vietnam War for two tours.

As a gung-ho Marine, Kovic is too honest and forthright for his own good. When he accidentally kills one of the members of his own squadron in combat, his commanding officer tells him he must be wrong and to forget about it. But when Kovic himself is shot and paralyzed from the waist down, he becomes a patient in a rundown Veterans Administration hospital in the Bronx, where both rats and illegal drugs are rampant. Truth finally catches up to the dreamer and Kovic begins a journey of change and discovery that forms the heart of this film.

"Born on the Fourth of July" is especially sensitive to how veterans of Vietnam found their hometowns and families when they returned. Kovic's emotional battles within his own family circle are very moving.

Cruise is one of the few well-known actors in Hollywood capable of playing this role. It is a part that must cover two decades without making either end of the time spectrum look false.

The excellent supporting cast in "Born on the Fourth of July" includes Willem Dafoe as Charlie, another paralyzed vet whom Kovic meets while carousing at a hotel and bar in Mexico that caters to disabled veterans and their monthly disability checks.

Rated R (violence, language).

Cruise's stardom based on ability

Tom Cruise has become something of a rarity in Hollywood—the tender age of 27. He's a big star who also happens to be a very good actor.

Stardom and skill are not always related in the business of making movies, as any follower of the Rambo series can attest.

After his film debut in 1980 in "Taps," a movie in which Cruise played a psychotic cadet, and an appearance in Francis Ford Coppola's "The Outsiders," Cruise was cast in the sleeper hit of 1983, "Risky Business." That film became a crossover hit for adults and teens thanks to Cruise's universally appealing performance.

"I'm sure a lot of people got dragged into seeing that one, but it was the kind of film that has a contagious rhythm," Cruise said. "Once you started to dance with it, so to speak, you were hooked."

"Also, my character of Joel Goodson was really a great guy and I'm sure every guy who saw the film, regardless of their age, wished they could share in Joel's little amorous adventure."

Cruise subsequently starred in a string of box office hits, including "Top Gun," "The Color of Money," "Cocktail" and "Rain Man." He and his wife, actress Mimi Rogers, now are on location in Charlotte, N.C., where Cruise is working on "Days of Thunder," a film about stock car drivers that is scheduled for a summer or fall release.

But it is the work in his newest film, director Oliver Stone's "Born on the Fourth of July," that is making Cruise an industry favorite to be nominated for best actor this year.

In the film, which is based on an autobiography of the same title by Vietnam veteran Ron Kovic, Cruise portrays Kovic, a young man who returns from the Vietnam War paralyzed from the waist down.

"When I first met Ron Kovic, the thing that impressed me was his honesty," Cruise said. "This is a man who is right out front on everything. I first talked with him while we were shooting 'Rain Man,' and he used to tell me I was going to wear him out with all my questions. But I needed to prepare for this role more than anything else I had ever done."

"I worked for scale, the minimum salary, (for Cruise, about $1,000 per week) because I really believed this story needed to be told. The atrocities weren't all in combat. Some of the things Ron and his buddies faced when they got back home were equally horrifying."

Some of these incidents depicted in the movie take place in a Veterans Administration hospital. The scenes, which show how paralyzed veterans took care of routine bodily functions, will not prove popular with many moviegoers, especially fans of Cruise.

"The studio put the word out that they wanted those scenes edited out of the final print," Cruise said. "But I feel that Oliver was right in demanding they stay in. How else is an audience going to understand the personal humiliation and suffering these guys went through?"

Many thought Cruise suffered a bit of professional humiliation last year when he was not nominated for his fine work in "Rain Man" opposite Dustin Hoffman, who earned the Oscar for Best Actor.

Janet Jackson's 'Rhythm' year's best dance album

Janet Jackson's rise to the top of the music world has been nothing short of amazing.

First she had to first overcome the notion that she was merely Michael Jackson's sister. That's no small challenge when you realize that four other Jackson brothers and another sister, LaToya, have yet to escape Michael's long shadow.

But Janet Jackson, with her 1986 album, "Control," not only established herself as an artist in her own right but also became a main force in bringing dance music to a mainstream audience.

Jackson, however, must have known she could not rest on her laurels. Showing the ambition, energy and talent that made "Control" a hit, Jackson again has stepped to the head of the dance music pack with her new album, "Rhythm Nation 1814."

Unlike most dance albums, "Rhythm Nation 1814" is as much a message as it is beat and music.

Jackson and her songwriting collaborators, Jimmy Jam and Terry Lewis, use the album's first three songs to touch on problems of cities — racial tensions and social ills — in the song "Rhythm Nation," and teen pregnancy, homeless children, illiteracy, drugs and crime on the tunes "State of the World" and "The Knowledge."
